

The Grant

Dr. Michael Purcell and his grant director, Dr. Sarah Riscoe, are in the line of fire between opposing governmental and political camps as they are awarded a grant to assess human risk factors in areas of four Latin American countries, including Cuba. As Michael and Sarah travel, they face danger and romance in Cuba, Guatemala, and the Yucatan. They question the real purpose of the grant and its implications on the United States. They encounter opposing groups within the U.S. government with conflicting agendas, and are forced to decide which of the camps to side with. The future of the United States and North America as they are now known are at stake in this year before a presidential election, and the choice these academics make will help decide the fate of the nations sovereignty.
